SAVED FOR A BETTER FATE.

A Pendleton man in Vale tries four months of self-destruction.

Pendleton, March 12.—[Special Telegram.]—Ullie, the man found at a cabin along Pendleton last night, told his attendants his history while in Pendleton. He came about ten days ago and engaged a room at the Golden Rule hotel. At night, while in bed, he desired to commit suicide by poisoning himself. He arose, tied a rope around his neck with a rope, and drew it with his hands until blood rushed from his nose and ears, several small blood vessels having burst. He did not consider the attempt satisfactory, and concluded to try drowning. He tried the water, but was too cold, and he thought it would be better to die on the railroad track and wait for a train to run over him. He staid there for several hours, and no train coming, got tired and resumed his journey. Being the cabin, he decided to enter and die by starvation. He is rapidly recovering from the effects of the poison.

Edward Green, a Wild Horse mountain farmer who was brought to Pendleton some days ago on a charge of insanity and released, attempted suicide a few days ago by taking morphine, but was prevented by a physician.

SCENES IN THE RELIEF ROOMS

First Sandwiches for the Starving Unemployed—A Starvation Laborers Pat to Work in Golden Gate Park—Subscriptions Increasing.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—All this afternoon the citizens' committee for the relief of the unemployed were busy examining applicants for work, and when the office closed 250 tickets, entitling the holder to employment in Golden Gate park had been issued, making 600 tickets in all that had been given out by the committee. Subscriptions received today swelled the amount of the disposal of the committee to $200, which will insure work for about 200 more men, and the committee hopes to raise enough money, in addition, to put 1000 men in all to work.

The scene about the committee's quarters was an interesting one when twenty-five dozen sandwiches, purchased with collections of money from the produce exchange, were passed to the hungry applicants for work, and policemen with buckets of water passed out to the waiting crowd every man a drink. Later an unknown man drove up with a wagon-load of biscuits and cheese, and sandwiches were again dispensed. A batch of meat tickets, 500 in number, were given the committee to-day by the same firm which heretofore supplied several hundred tickets for needy workmen.

An Artificial Lake Necessary to Drive: Canals River—Completion of the Canal Will Cost $300,000,000.

PANAMA, Feb. 24.—[Via San Francisco, March 12.]—The commission sent from France by the Panama Canal Company to investigate and report on the possibility of completing the canal has returned to Panama after remaining in Panama and on the isthmus for three weeks. The commission consisted of twelve French and Belgian engineers. They declined to express their views until they had made a careful study of the situation in Panama. When it was known that the commission was coming a few hundred laborers were employed, the machinery was painted and everything put in its presentable condition as possible for their inspection. The visiting engineers examined all the works carefully, made plans for completing the canal, and returned to France. They were accompanied by a series of banquets, but failed to respond to any of the toasts designed to bring out their individual opinions. Nothing will therefore be known as to the conclusions reached until the annual meeting of the company in April.

The general view upon the isthmus, however, is that the report will be favorable and recommend the completion of the canal. During the fourteen months since active operations ceased upon the canal little or no work has been done. A line of the canal still employed along the line of the canal, and the machinery, but this force has been too small to protect the machinery plant belonging to the company, and which represents an original expenditure of $10,000,000. This has been exposed to heavy rains, and as a whole is in a state of ruin. At the mouth of the canal on the Pacific side, there are at present three dredgers, two of which are dismantled, but all are in good condition. From Tobago across the isthmus the machinery of the company lies in all directions. The largest machine of the company is the Culbreth cut, eight miles from Panama.

At Colon the canal has been built for a distance of twelve miles, with an average width of 400 yards. From Monkey Hill, three miles from Colon, until the mouth of the canal is reached, the banks are completely covered with uncontrolled machinery, rotting away under the action of the water and sun, while the canal itself is filled with a small fleet of logs, steam launches and small sampans. The American Dredging Company still keeps its office open at Colon, and the Panama Company still keeps their offices open here and at Colon. Apart from this and the small guard maintained along the canal, there is no sign of life.

In case the commission reports favorably for the prosecution of work, it is believed they will recommend the building of a large lake beyond the Colon cut, with locks, which will cost the company of $100,000,000, diverting the Chagres river into the lake for a supply of water for the canal, but even this plan involves an overflow of the river in the wet season, and in the dry season there is a lack of water. This is the only way to keep the canal open, and all other attempts to divert it at the point where it touches the line of the canal have failed. Even should the proposed plan succeed and an attempt be made to complete the canal, with this engineering feature added, the cost of completing the canal is estimated at $320,000,000.

THE LAKE SHORE DISASTER.

Criminal Negligence of All the Trainmen—Evidence Before the Coroner.

BORER, March 12.—[Special Telegram.]—The coroner's jury on the Lake Shore disaster to-day, Daniel Beckwith, forward brakeman on the train, stated that when the train started to Dunkirk it broke in two between the last coach and the sleeper. All connections were broken, and the train was left to the coaches and closed the drawbar. There was a Miller and another kind of drawbar to the coach. Both seemed all right, but the safety chains were broken. His first learned that the train was broken, and he went to the conductor Sullivan, who said not to stop, but to keep the forward section moving. Beckwith started back to Dunkirk, when he felt the brakes let go. He jumped off to signal the engineer to go ahead, but before he could do so the crash came.

SEATTLE, March 12.—[Special Telegram.]—On the arrival of the Olympian here from Tacoma at 10 o'clock to-night, United States Inspector Leonard arrested a passenger named Michael Boyle on suspicion of being an anarchist. It is supposed that he is a member of the gang of anarchists who have been operating between here and Tacoma for some time.
